

HOUSE LEADERS MOVE FOR EMBARGO ON MUNITIONS

Want Six Months' Halt On Shipments to Warring Nations

DRIVE NOW UNDER WAY
McReynolds Plans to Seek
"Gag Rule" to Assure Passage

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 23.—House leaders today moved for speedy passage of a compromise neutrality resolution imposing a six month embargo on shipments of munitions to warring nations.

With sponsors of the measure fearful that the United States might become embroiled in a European conflict, a drive was underway to send the measure to the White House before night.

Chairman McReynolds, D., of Tennessee, of the Foreign Affairs Committee, fearful of a House revolt, planned to seek a "gag rule" which would assure passage of the compromise plan without change.

As the result of action of the Senate in voting the Pittman resolution, with a permanent mandatory embargo on shipments of arms to warring nations, President Roosevelt agreed to a compromise.

Under the compromise the resolution would: Prevent shipment of munitions to warring nations under penalty of $10,000 fine, and five years' imprisonment, until February 29, 1936.

Require the President to issue a proclamation in the event of war between Italy and Ethiopia.

Impose licensing of all munitions makers, and require a close check of their activities.

Prohibit shipment of arms in American vessels to warring nations.

Prevent ban on summaries of warring countries entering American ports.

Permit the President to prohibit American travelers in war zones, except at their own risk.

House Republicans on the Foreign Affairs Committee, while approving the measure, reserved the right to make a fight for a permanent arms embargo.

ROGERS' SENSE OF VALUES NEVER WAS DISTORTED DURING QUICK RISE TO FAME OR AFTER AMASSING OF GREAT WEALTH; ALWAYS MAINTAINED NATURALNESS

Received Big Offer; Thought
Boys at Friars' Club Were Kidding Him

WAS ALWAYS GENEROUS

Never Took His Success For Granted; Appreciated
Kindnesses Shown

(This is the fourth installment of the life of Will Rogers by James E. Brown. In yesterday's article, the writer described Will's early stage career, and his transition from trick rider to humorous monologist.)

By James E. Brown
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1935, I. N. S.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(INS)—At one time, Will Rogers was regarded as the highest-paid performer on the American stage.

Yet never during his rapid climb to fame, or after he had attained his greatest success, did he become conceited, lose his boyish naturalness, or allow his sense of values to become distorted.

Kealey Allen, a dramatic critic, tells the story that Charles L. Wagner saw Will on the stage and immediately thought he would be good on a lecture tour. So he wrote to him and offered him $30,000 a month to sign a contract.

About a week later, Allen and Wagner were standing on a corner talking when Will walked by. Will nodded to Allen. Wagner turned and asked the critic:

"How well do you know Will Rogers?"

"Oh, well enough to speak to him," said Allen.

"Well, I wish you would find out something for me. I wrote to Rogers and offered him $30,000 a month to go on a lecture tour, and he hasn't even answered my letter."

Allen said he would ask Will about it, and the next day he met him on Broadway and mentioned the incident. Will laughed.

"Well, I'll be darned," he said. "Yeah, I received a letter like that, but I thought it was some of the boys at the Friars' Club kidding me. You know, they got a bar-tender up there named Charles Wagner."

It was typical of Rogers that he would think he was being kidded by such a sensational offer. He never took his success for granted.

His popularity with his fellow actors was attested last year when he was elected Abbot of the Friars Club. With the notice of his election, they mailed him autographs of every member of the club, and they received the following telegram in answer:

"Received lovely autographs—also wire from Jessel boys—I never hated to not do anything as bad as this. And if I was going to be there any at all I would, but I won't—get an active member—I certainly want you everyone to know that I certainly appreciate your kind thoughts of me—best wishes to all—Will Rogers."

When the Friars were raising money for alterations on their club rooms, they asked Will for a donation and received the following reply:

"Enclosing check. Couldn't think of having my brother Friars playing pinocchio on the street."

"When I die," Will Rogers once said, "My epitaph or whatever you call those signs on graveyards is going to read, 'I joked about every prominent man of my time, but I never met a man I didn't like.' I am proud of that. I can hardly wait to die so it can be carved."

In thus selecting the wording of his epitaph, Rogers unconsciously analyzed the factor underlying the affection with which he was regarded by the people of two hemispheres. It was simply because he never met a man he didn't like that he never met a man who didn't like him. Thus, he could aim his jokes at presidents, dictators, millionaires, and senators, and still be regarded by them with affection.

Any suspicion that his careless manner of dress was an affectation was dispelled when he attended a formal White House reception in his shiny blue serge suit.

He was the guest of honor. And he was the only person present who did not appear in full evening dress. But people knew that he never wore evening clothes, and they also knew that he had been to the White House many times before. He had slept there during Coolidges' administration, and he had swapped jokes with President Harding. And frequently, during the present administration, when he was in Washington, he would call the White House and receive an enthusiastic invitation to "come on over."

(In the fifth installment, Brown discusses the peculiar nature of Rogers humor and the philosophy back of it.)

MAY PROTEST CLOSING OF STATION 13 HOURS A DAY

Business Men, Service Clubs
Are Seriously Considering
Lodging Complaint

IT IS WIDELY DISCUSSED

Considerable comment has been caused about town over the announcement yesterday in the Courier as to the closing of the P. R. R. passenger station here, 13 hours out of every 24 and all day on Sunday.

Individuals commented differently on the subject. Some are of the opinion that the P. R. R. is justified in closing the ticket window and laying off two employees while others contend that the service is being cut too closely.

Indications are that some individuals are going to protest to the company while others claim that protests will be of no avail because figures will show that the company is not doing the business out of Bristol, to warrant keeping the station open.

Richard W. French, president of the Bristol Rotary Club, today said that the matter would be brought before the next meeting of the Board of Governors of that organization. "We realize," said Mr. French, that certain matters have to be made but we are of the opinion that they are cutting the service just a trifle too close."

David Landreth of the D. Landreth Seed Company, expressed himself today and said that he was of the opinion that the Landreth firm would protest the closing of the station.

Mr. Landreth mentioned the number who travel today by automobile and inferred that of course this has a bearing on the amount of business done by the P. R. R. "They have their records which will show the amount of business done and the hours and days on which there is the most travel," he stated.

A number of signal towers are also being closed between Philadelphia and New York.

The pumping station at South Bristol which has been in service for many years has been dispensed with and dismantled. This was made possible by the electrification of the line.

Assure 39,000 Jobs

Harrisburg, Aug. 23.—Regular jobs for more than 39,000 Pennsylvanians now on relief will be provided when the Works Progress Administration approves the department of highway's $2 million dollar road betterment projects, Secretary Warren VanDyke said today.

Department officials were optimistic that approval will soon be forthcoming, pointing out that no employees on the state-wide project would be taken off the state relief rolls.

Awaits Intervention Move

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—President Roosevelt was waiting today to learn whether his personal intervention would succeed in ending the bitter Camden, N. J., shipyard strike which had tied up work on seven naval vessels for weeks.

Indications were that both the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, and the Industrial Unions of Marine and Shipbuilding workers would agree to conditions of arbitration laid down by the President. They have until noon, Tuesday, August 27th, to file written acceptance.

Specific denial of closed shop in an executive order created the "Camden Board of Arbitration," and was a blow to the union which has been holding out steadily on that issue. On the other hand Mr. Roosevelt stipulated that the shipyard should not fill vacant or new positions with new workers so long as men who had been employed since August 1, 1933, were available, competent and willing to accept them.

Otherwise, the board of three—Rear-Admiral Henry A. Wiley, retired; Robert Bruere, New York banker; and Col. F. P. Douglass, of Oklahoma City, are directed to arbitrate general questions of wages, hours, and working conditions which have been under dispute since May 11th.

If both sides accept arbitration plans they permit themselves to abide by its findings, and work must be resumed at once, and continue at least until naval contracts are fulfilled.

All men who walked out May 11th must be taken back without discrimination.

REPORT KARPIS HERE; POLICE WATCH ROADS

Two Men in Car Cause Suspicion by Their Peculiar Actions

RUMOR SPREADS FAST

Bristol was agog yesterday when rumors circulated that Karpis, the well-known gangster, was in town.

Police snapped to attention, telephone wires buzzed and in Philadelphia bandit chasers careened along the streets.

If the suspect was Karpis he is still at large or at least was at last reports. About noon yesterday a sedan pulled up at a Bristol gas station with two men in it. The car carried a Florida license and the tire cover had Jacksonville, Texas, on it. The men inquired where route 13 would take them and were informed that it lead into Frankford avenue and then into Philadelphia.

"We don't have to go into New Jersey, do we?" inquired the pair.

"Do we have to cross any bridges?" was their next query.

Then the detour at Torresdale was explained to the strangers, but they stated that as long as they could reach Philadelphia, they didn't care.

Then the men drove away and pulled slightly off the road as if to enter a tap-room. They glanced back and saw the gas station attendants watching them and then they drove off at a rapid rate of speed.

Some of those who saw the two men say they recognized one of the pair as Karpis. The Bristol police were informed and immediately notified Philadelphia.

Philadelphia police sent out an alarm and all roads leading into Philadelphia were immediately covered.

"MAIN STREETS" PASS BY FAMED JOHNSTOWN

One of Major Catastrophes of Nation Occurred There in 1889

PARTS OF DAM STAND

HARRISBURG, Aug. 23.—Thousands of motorists, as they hurry across the "main streets" of south central Pennsylvania, pass unconcernedly on either side of one of the best known cities in the whole State, according to Warren Van Dyke, Secretary of Highways. These "main streets"—the William Penn Highway, Route 22, and the Lincoln Highway, Route 30—pass by Johnstown north and south, but a departure from either over Route 219 is necessary if the traveler would visit this scene of the great flood, one of the major catastrophes in the history of the State and, indeed, the Nation.

It was on Friday, May 31 in 1889 that sixteen million tons of water roared through the deep valley where 39,000 souls made their homes. Here where the Little Conemaugh and Stony Creek join to form the Conemaugh River, seven or eight small towns nestled in a community known generally as Johnstown.

Higher up their narrow valley wealthy metropolitan sportsmen had bought a tract as a hunting and fishing preserve and within its confines was Conemaugh Lake, extending three and a half miles upstream and more than a mile wide. Its location there, with the ever present threat of sudden death, had been a matter of grave concern to the townsfolk for some time. Engineers, however, made regular inspections of the impounding dam which was 99 feet in thickness at the base and even the wildest alarmist rested easier.

Spring thaws in 1889 had brought high waters to many central-state streams, when in late May a rain which fell steadily for 48 hours made raging torrents of the smallest mountain brooks. Flood conditions prevailed throughout the State and early in the morning of May 31, Stony Creek broke its barriers and flooded a portion of the town piling logs against the inundated houses. But this was nothing compared with events of the afternoon.

The waters in South Fork rose steadily, spilling over the dam and late in the afternoon carrying away that structure with a mighty sweep that brought death to more than 2200 persons as its thundering flood flowed through South Fork, Mineral Point, Woodvale, Conemaugh, Kerville, Franklin, East Conemaugh, Millville and Cambria. Tragedy struck with such speed that many were trapped in their homes despite the heroic efforts of one John Baker, a Paul Revere of the occasion, and the warnings of screaming whistles and rattling telegraph instruments.

Incidents of personal heroism were so numerous and spectacular, Edward C. Will alone being credited with saving 22 lives. Governor Beaver appointed a Commission to serve in the crisis and a fund of more than $3,000,000 was raised throughout the State and Nation and administered to the unfortunates. Precautions were taken to forestall pestilence and healthful conditions were soon restored.

The dead, many never identified, were buried with touching ceremony and in a few weeks the dazed populace set about the tremendous task of building a new city and resuming their place in commerce and industry. Flood memories of this horrible flood are tempered with the knowledge that a newer and greater city has arisen to take its place with leaders in the Nation—a glowing tribute to a staunch determination to overcome all obstacles.

Little remains to remind one of this hectic day except portions of the dam which caused the flood and an immaculately kept cemetery nearby with the graves of the unidentified, uniformly marked like those of soldiers, and overshadowed by a magnificent monument.

Nor is Johnstown the only point of interest in this delightful area. To the west on Route 22 in Westmoreland County, the visitor may examine the site of the old Pennsylvania Canal, a part of the Portage Railroad system which carried traffic between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh in the early part of the last century. This system employed an odd assortment of transportation agencies—rivers and canals were used, rail cars on the level and inclines over the mountains.

State Senator Theodore Lane Bean, of Montgomery county, will be the speaker. His address will start at 3:30 and will be followed by a picnic and sports of all sorts.

Previous to the speaking program there will be another sports program which will include a softball game at 1:30 between the county Republican candidates and the office holders.

At 2:40 there will be a three-legged race for men and at 3 o'clock there will be a potato race for women.

Assistant District Attorney Edward G. Blester, of Doylestown, president of the Middle Bucks Republican Association, said today that unusual interest is being shown in the picnic scheduled for tomorrow.

WARRING ON LOTTERIES

Although Speaker Byrns left to younger men collection of the kisses with which Mrs. Harriman proposed to launch as many legislative ships as might be necessary to carry the Kennedy national lottery bill in to port, it can not be said that the government is not interested in lotteries. On the contrary, Uncle Sam is so interested in them that his postoffice department recently issued fraud orders against 450 residents of foreign countries as one attack in his war against sales of foreign lottery tickets in this country.

How much these sales amount to annually has been estimated anywhere from a few million up to astronomical figures. The postoffice department's experts believe that $10,000,000 is not far from the correct figure. Practically all the agents using the mails to distribute foreign lottery tickets in this country live outside the United States. Lottery agents ordinarily use first-class mail when trying to build up a customer list, and postal authorities have no authority to open such mail. They may, however, stamp on a suspected letter this legend: "Supposed to contain matter prohibited importation." At the office of destination the addressee is requested to open mail thus stamped in the presence of the local postmaster. If he does so and the letter contains lottery tickets, the tickets are confiscated and the postoffice department issues a fraud order against the foreign agent who sent them through the mail.

Judging by the recurrent publicity on American winners of, say, an Irish hospital sweepstakes, the postoffice department is still far from victory in its anti-lottery war. Maybe the day will yet come when Mrs. Harriman will be differently received at Washington.

WHEN HOG PRICES MOUNT

Chicago's hog news last week provided further evidence of the difficulty of federal economic planning for the farm when and if the weather will not stay hatched.

Under AAA contracts for the year from December 1, 1933, to December 1, 1934, farmers who in the corresponding year had raised 54,319,000 hogs, agreed to raise in the first AAA year only some 40,000,000 hogs, a reduction of 25 per cent. But the big drought came, bringing high corn prices as well as other things in its wake, and thus the hog crop was not reduced by merely some 13,000,000 but by 20,000,000. This year the AAA hog contract called for a reduction of 10 per cent. under the production of last year. All this has meant of late at the stock yards in Chicago weekly arrivals of 50,000 hogs instead of 250,000 as was the case a few years ago. Hog production in 1933 amounted to $1,752,000; the estimated production this year is 50,000,000.

What would have been true of hog supplies and prices in August, 1935, if the AAA had not run into the great drought and the diminished corn crop of 1934 is, perhaps, anybody's guess. All that one can be sure of with respect to the prices themselves, is that receipts at the Chicago stockyards have reached an all-time low and prices have jumped to above $12 a hundred weight, the highest price since 1929.

Just think: A year ago today the industrious prairie housewife was dusting off the goldfish.

RAH-RAHS IN CHINA

NANKING—(INS)—The great impress which American university life has made on the Chinese National Government was well illustrated at the annual meeting of the American University Club of Nanking. Six hundred graduates of colleges and universities in the United States attended the function, the vast majority being Chinese. Practically the entire 600 members are officials of the government. American college yells and songs showed that the Chinese had not forgotten their student life.

"CAST INTO EDEN"

BY HENRY C. ROWLAND

SYNOPSIS

Jerome Crain, young naval architect, and a wealthy society girl, named Linda, are guests aboard the yacht owned by the millionaire, Thomas Tucker, anchored at San Cristobal. Jerome and Linda are bored with one another and when the other guests go ashore, the young couple, each believing the other had gone, stays on board. One of the sailors contracts fever and the yacht is quarantined. No one is allowed to come aboard or leave. But Jerome and Linda escape in a skiff.

CHAPTER III

From the shore of which they could only see the lights there came a roaring sound, wind through the palms and other foliage. The black zone of water astern faded, then whitened. A flare of lightning showed its surface seething and tormented. Jerome had barely got in his oars and taken the tiller when the squall struck them.

The trim little craft was swept along with it in a lashing deluge of warm spray. Then down came the rain in a slanting torrent. The fishing boat was equipped for this sort of thing, half decked, with a weather cloth that Jerome had so devised it could be slid along gunners to cover most of the open part.

"Couldn't have made the shore if we'd wanted to," Jerome shouted. "This won't last long."
It lasted long enough to drive them out past the entrance flash and into open sea. The flarings and thunderings grew fainter. The torrential rain stopped as if somebody had closed off the valve. With a few fitful puffs of lessening violence the wind expired. The little boat wallowed about in a rapidly subsiding chop of waves. They found themselves becalmed under a multitude of bright stars what wefe like lanterns hung low in a purple velvet sky. Beyond them the pallid sheen of myriad celestial bodies too infinitely remote for any detailing merged into a pale luminosity. The water blazed with phosphorescent flashes.

"I rather liked all that," Linda said.
"A salt shower followed by a fresh one is tonic," Jerome agreed. He cleared the hood off the outboard engine, then started it. This was powered enough to drive the fishing skiff at twelve knots speed. Giving the tiller to Linda he pumped out the boat.

"Better take a nap," he advised.
"I've slept enough on this putrid cruise to last me this run."
"That ought not to be so long. You've got clear of the yacht and clear of the crowd. And in a few hours you'll be clear of me. All is swell."

Jerome was fighting to keep awake when the dawn rushed in and expanded into full day. Presently a slanting ray tickled Linda's eyelids so that she gave a snore and awoke. Directly ahead of them an island of the thousands from which the Mosquito Coast gets its name seemed to be pushed up as if to offer a rest station. It was a low island that looked fresh and verdant.

Jerome had swerved off his course to strike it. The elapsed time did not check with his estimated speed and distance, and it was an hour sooner than he expected to sight the island. A fair current no doubt. His compass was small but accurate and he knew the deviation caused by the engine when running due south. There was no iron in the boat's construction.

He discovered then to his disgust that an iron raft for lifting big fish into the boat had in some way been thrown almost against the compass under the furled sail.

"How did that raft get there?" he asked. "It's put the compass off!" Linda said indifferently. "The thing was under my shoulder and I shoved it out of my way. What of it?"

"It's queered my reckoning. See if you can find the chart."
With the same maddening coolness she said, "I think it blew overboard in the squall. I saw something white flying away."

"Then we are stung."
"Not badly. You can see the mountains on the mainland."
"Yes, and we can see the sun on the horizon and get the depth of water. That would be enough for a local coast pilot but I don't happen to be one."

She looked at the island ahead. "Let's land and freshen up and get some breakfast."
"All right. Steer then while I straighten out this mess."
He wanted to take stock of what neath the water line and the brine was pouring in. He might have stuffed some clothing or a bight of the sail into the tear but a part of it was under the flooring and there was no time to rip this up nor any tool with which to do so at hand.

The boat was filling fast. Jerome said grimly to Linda: "Now we have done it. Stand by to abandon ship."

She said bitterly: "The sun was in my eyes."

"Why didn't you say so?"
He stopped the engine then quickly caught a turn of the anchor line round it and the other end to one of the kapok boat cushions to buoy the spot. Without the weight of the outboard engine the boat would float awash, having no ballast. He then unclamped the engine from the stern transom and let it they had. They had swerved to the eastward to approach the island on its westward or sheltered side when the breeze sprang up. This put the sun directly in Linda's eyes and dazzled her. Also its reflection on the water and the bow wave prevented her discovering that the water had shoaled and that the bottom was studded with coral heads.

Jerome was on his hands and knees rummaging in the forward locker to get out the anchor and a coil of line, when there came a smashing, crunching contact and a flood of water almost in his face. The boat's way was checked for an instant. Then she slid over the ledge that was only a few inches beneath the surface and into the deeper water between it and the shore.

But Jerome saw instantly that she would never reach the shore. The jagged crest of coral had ripped away one of the cedar strakes bego overboard in about a fathom and a half of water.

The little boat was filling fast. She was broad enough of beam to float on an even keel awash. Jerome got out his oars and started to pull in for the curve of white sandy beach. Before he had taken many strokes he was waist deep. Progress was very slow and it grew still slower as finally the boat filled awash.

Such articles aboard as could float were floating but retained by two or three inches of gunwale. Linda also was afloat. Jerome floundered over the side and found that he could stand in about four feet of water. Wading and swimming when the water deepened a little they managed to haul the boat along until she grounded on the beach.

"Main Streets" Pass

Altoona, with its world-famous Horse Shoe Curve on the Pennsylvania Railroad and its extensive railroad shops, is easily accessible in nearby Blair County and may be reached by a short trip north from Route 22 over Route 220. The railroad shops there are reputed to be the largest in the world and technical men from every land come to see their profession in its acme of perfection. Even the name of the town hinges on its importance as a rail center, and the fortunate visitor may meet a patriarch of the city who will explain that the early settlers selected Altoona in homage to Altona, in Denmark, where the first railroad shops in the world are believed to have been located.

Long before the coming of the white man, the site of the city was a favorite haunt of the Oneida, Seneca and Tuscarora Indians. The Civil War was a boon to the struggling railroad business and it was here that loyal Governors of northern states gathered to renew their pledge to President Lincoln and his determination to preserve the Union in the dark days of the War of the Rebellion.

Rich as it is in historic background, this area—including adjoining Somerset and Bedford Counties—offers delightful interludes for those who revel in the awe-inspiring beauties of rugged peaks and quiet glades. Just west of Bucktown, in eastern Somerset County the Lincoln Highway climbs to over 2900 feet, its highest point within the borders of the State. Moving east the decline is rapid but easily negotiated and within a few miles the traveler enters Bedford County at approximately 1600 feet above sea level. The decline continues in a series of rolling hills across the county, but when the traveler reaches the Bedford-Fulton line he is again on the ascent, leaving the county at almost the exact elevation at which he entered.

Complete details of this or other routes to points of interest in the State may be had without charge by addressing the Bureau of Publicity and Information, Department of Highways, at Harrisburg.

COMMUNICATION

"POTATOES AND ONIONS"

Bristol, Aug. 23, 1935. Fill up the cup, again, O Walter, For Mark will save the famous "Fatter." That fellow, yes, he knows his onions, his apples, corns, and maybe bunions. He tells about "Potato Crop," our laws on this appear to flop. A new scheme tried on this last week, to snatch it from its lofty peak.

The German, French may like their fried, they don't go bad if cooked in hide. To keep in fashion some are mashed; with milk or cream are often dashed. In many ways they may be spied, and with the oyster they are pied. Yet Grandpa too, so stern and bold, will take his in his fingers bold. But why this nonsense and this bluff? Attach the laws to other stuff. Has cotton gone, or shall rum stay? Have wheat and hogs sailed down the bay? No doubt the milk and then the cow will grimly follow next or now! Is so, it seems we're going under; call out the "big guns," roll your thunder.

To raise potatoes we should know, the farmer uses plow and hoe. The trains are loaded with the freight, the population, hungry, wait. The vendors bring them to our door, and if they don't it makes us sore. No more potatoes can we buy, unless a stamp shall greet the eye.

For if the Bootlegs fill your pail, you're sure to land in nearby jail. This Stamp Act really makes us sick; recalls the "Days of Seventy-Six." And when we say "What is it for?" it is the next step towards "A WAR." The poor man gets the sock on jaw. The only way, "Repeat the LAW."

CANNING OF CORN IS PROCESS THAT REQUIRES MUCH CARE

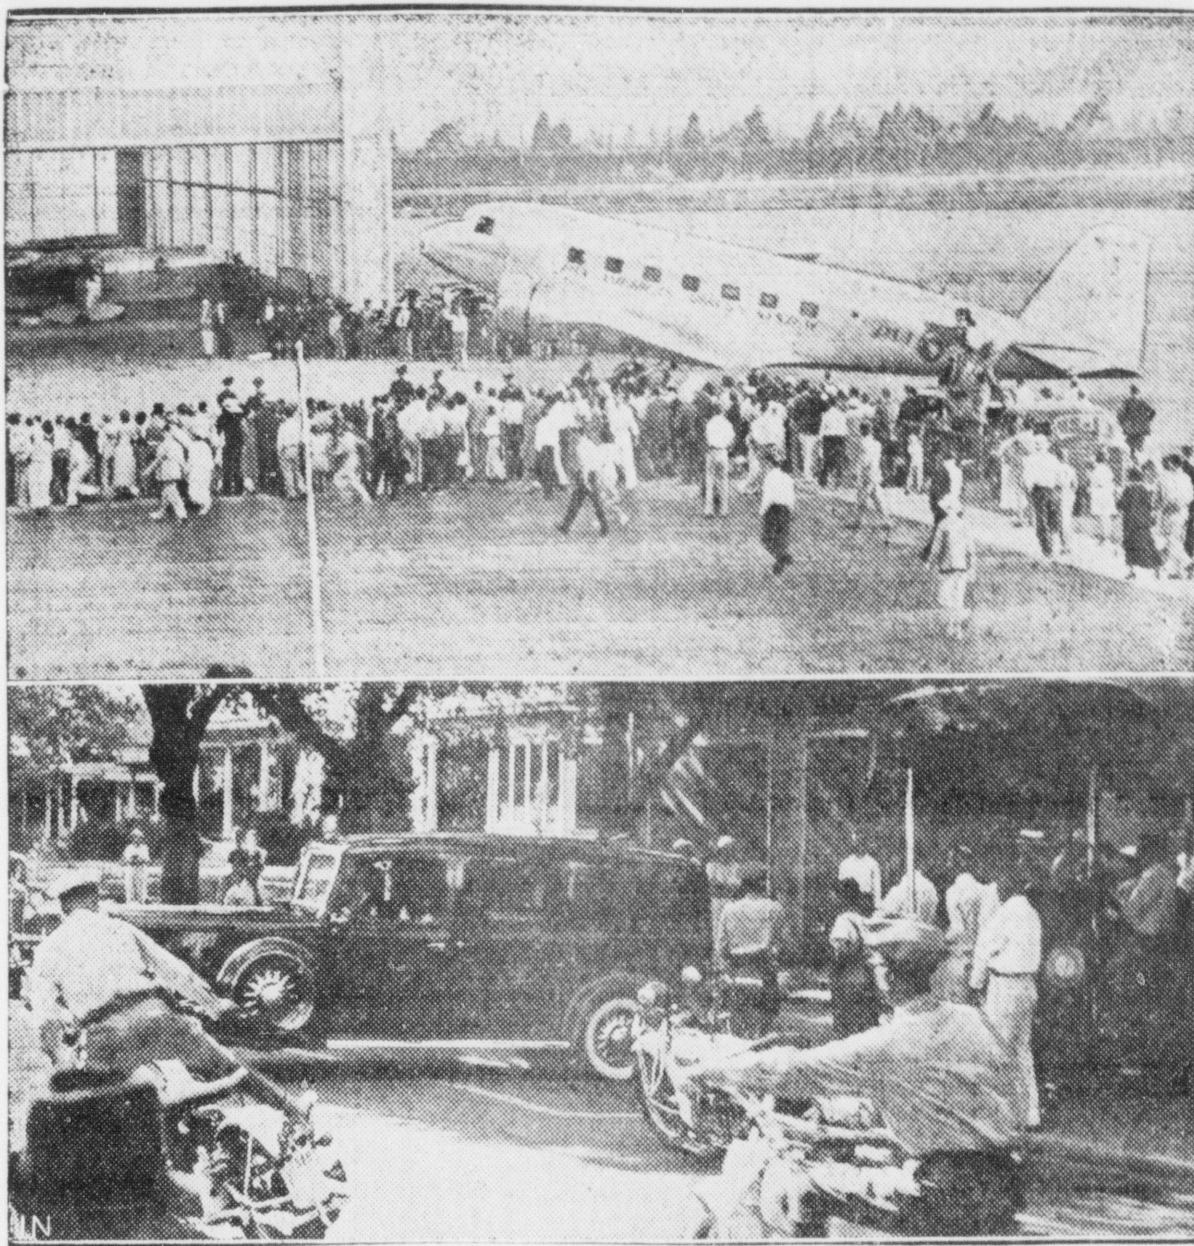

By RHANDENA A. ARMSTRONG
(Home Economics Representative)

Corn, or maize as it was called by the American Indians, presents a difficult problem to the canning minded housewife.

Corn, a non-acid vegetable, may contain certain spore-forming bacteria which are very resistant to heat and are very likely not to be destroyed by the temperature of 212° F. of the water bath. For absolute safety and success, the steam pressure cooker is recommended for processing corn. In such a cooker a temperature of 240° F. or 280° may be obtained which will usually render harmless the most persistent spore-forming bacteria.

Three standard methods of canning corn are recommended: corn on the cob, corn cream style, and corn whole grain style. Select tender ears of corn if you are going to can the whole ear. It is important that uniform length and size be used. Clean, blanch, cold dip, and pack at once, alternating tips and ends of the ears. Add one teaspoon of sugar and one of salt for each quart.

SILENT CROWDS PAY RESPECTS TO POST AND ROGERS

If tin is used a No. 3C enamel is advised. Process at 10 pounds pressure for 40 minutes in the pressure cooker or three hours in the water bath. For the cream style method, directions are given in the Canning Bulletin which can be secured from the Agricultural Extension Association, Doylestown. The following method for whole grain corn has been recommended recently by the government. Place ears in boiling water 4 to 5 minutes at simmering temperature. Cue corn from ear, do not scrape, add 1 teaspoon salt and 2 teaspoons sugar for each quart of corn and half as much boiling water as corn by weight. Reheat to simmering and pack hot in containers. Process immediately in No. 2 cans at 10 pounds pressure and a temperature of 240° F. for 50 minutes, or in glass quarts 70 minutes. If the water bath is used, process at least three hours.

Corn is ready for canning if by pressing the thumb and finger on some grains they burst and a very thin milk substance flows freely. Golden Bantam is a favorite home variety although Country Gentleman and Evergreen have been canned successfully.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

By ANN PAGE

If you had planned to have Baked Ham for Sunday dinner, it would be well to change to poultry or lamb. Fresh and cured pork continue to rise in price; broiling or frying chickens are moderate; lamb is of excellent quality and also moderately priced. There are many good values in fresh vegetables. Corn, peas, lettuce, tomatoes, and eggplant are low priced. Pine cauliflower and green lima beans are coming to market. Potatoes of exceptional quality are selling at the lowest price in many weeks.

Many fruits tempt the appetite and are seedless grapes and red Malaga, Bartlett pears, oranges, bananas and peaches. Then there are cantaloupe, honeydews, honeyballs, Persia and Casaba melons—it is difficult to make a choice.

Egg, butter and cheese prices remain about the same. Fish is to be had in great variety at attractive prices.

Following are three Sunday dinner menus at different budget levels planned to use seasonable foods.

FASHION PARADE

By Margaret Garrahan

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK—(INS)—A "new fashion" to take back to college rather than the traditional "what is worn in college" theme is the idea to follow in planning 1936 college wardrobes. And first consideration, according to the stylists, is the new silhouette with pinched-in waist, wide belts, smooth hips and swinging skirts... and accents on the shoulders instead of the bust.

To get away from too much sweater-and-skirt, they're suggesting sheer wool frocks with velvet trim for campus wear and not-too-extreme, practical things of plain silk and non-stretch fabrics for rushing and afternoon. You have to have skirts, of course, and everybody knows the new pleated and gored ones have it head and shoulders over last year's straight ones for long hours of sitting in a classroom. They're the answer perfect. "Date" and evening dresses are elected—and they only, incidentally—to quench your thirst for the ultra-new and carry out whatever Renaissance yens you may have. For dates there are velvet dresses with prim, starched lace collars, velvet

Evening gowns should run more to formality than an ingenue quality, they're saying—which'll probably delight the hearts of any number of frosh-to-be but cause no end among their mamas... Personally we think there's been too much ingenue, anyway... And they're to be silvery by hook or crook—via fabrics, metallic touches or whatnot.

NEW YORK—(INS)—Gray jersey is rating play as the terribly important thing for that first Fall frock... One shop does it in a simple shirtrock with six slant pockets and a high knotted collar, an all-around pleated skirt model and a devastating sports style with buttons running down the back and red leather applique on the belt—all very swell... Anything gray is grand in sportswear this year, anyway, and one of the smartest ideas of the season is gray velvet... Another thing they're going gaga over is the military theme—whatever the reason. The Summer's frogs and braided trims, wethinks, started it all. Mayhap Mussolini had something to do with it, too. At any rate we're to see, among other things, capes with contrast braid trim swung over feminine shoulders no end this Fall, suits with standup military collars, contrasting over-blouses, tapering-to-the-waist military fastenings and whatnot...

One of our pets: the big plaid blanket coat—and it's back bigger than ever this Fall... Latest goofism in hats is the little Scotch slant-it-on-the-side-of-your-head. And ho hum—how long is it since the last bat of that?... Southampton came out en masse for chiffon pleated skirts and trailing scarfs the other p. m. Also such startling contrasts as a flowing white chiffon worn over a scarlet-bordered white foundation and a sleek navy crepe affair with white pique revers and straps and a deep, deep skirt border of the same stuff...

NATIVITY CLUB BOXERS TO OPPOSE ST. ANN'S

Nativity Catholic Club of West Philadelphia will furnish the opposition to the members of St. Ann's A. A. boxing team here Monday night, according to Match-Maker Sammy Moffo. The members of the Nativity team were sanctioned yesterday by the Middle Atlantic District of the Amateur Athletic Union. The bouts will be held in St. Ann's open-air arena, Wood street.

Several new faces are listed on the St. Ann's team. Johnny Raccagno, who recently recovered from a shoulder injury, will wear the Purple and Gold trunks against Johnny Quinn of the Nativity team. Raccagno and Quinn are in the 148 pound class. "Eddie" Dugan gave a brilliant exhibition several weeks ago drew Billie Burke as his opponent in the 136 pound class. Nelson Campbell, 127, a new-comer in the local ranks and hailing from Harriman is pitted against Tom Keenan, of Nativity. William McCahan also from the Harriman club is matched with Cy Skyhlma. They will fight in the 121 pound class.

The heaviest weight bout will be between "Henny" Kornstedt, St. Ann's, and Joie Schofield, well-known amateur boxer who has fought for the highly-touted Mason Club on several occasions. Kornstedt is a novice in the boxing game but has shown up well in the exhibitions put on while training in the St. Ann's ring.

Five localities who were on the card the last show have returned. Al Paris who came through with a 20-second knock-out will attempt to finish Bob White. Donato Sciarra, better known as Young Tally, is against a tough battler in the person of Alfred Turan-ski. Alfred Zeffries who is noted for his short one-two punch will have as his Nativity opponent, Jimmy Viscuso. Vince Delia, 118, is up against John Al-bertson.

"Chet" Castor, who put up an excellent battle against Johnny Ferrara in his last bouts, is again listed. Castor was beaten by Ferrara but the fact that Ferrara has engaged in over one hundred bouts and was no novice in the game, failed to take any prestige away from the local Simon Pure. Castor drew as his opponent, Kenny Williams. But Williams is having a bit of difficulty with his foot, so it is most likely that a substitute will be matched against the Purple and Gold warrior.

CATHOLIC BOYS' CLUB DEFEATS THIRD WARD

Yesterday afternoon on Leedom's field the Catholic Boys' Club finally set back the strong Third Ward nine in a closely fought contest that ended in the score of 3 to 2. The deciding score didn't come until the last half of the ninth inning. Jack Mulligan singled to left. Walker was hit by one of Muffett's wild tosses and Phillips walked. Gallagher stepped to the plate and squeezed the winning run across.

Billy Gallagher pitched for the Boys' Club and allowed the usual Third Ward sluggers only three well scattered strike-outs and six walks. The two Third Ward runs were scored on misplays. Billy's opponent was the well-known Tommy Muffett who being in bad condition went through the game on good support. Muffett had only two strikeouts in the entire nine innings. Still he allowed the Catholic boys only five hits.

The win puts the Catholic team in first place being one full game in front of the Shamrocks. A game this afternoon will decide the first place position.

Boxing certainly has come into its own again since the St. Ann's club started boxing shows at their open-air arena... no matter what ward you go into you will find youngsters battling away at one another in some kind of gym or improvised ring.

The Third Ward Athletic Club has erected a regulation ring in the rear of an office street building where the members can be found training and learning the many art of self-defense.

Over in the Fourth Ward, they too, have a gym rigged up where the lads from the neighborhood get their licks in... up in O'Boyle's skating rink, too, the Harriman A. C. members have taken up the sport seriously... also the First Ward headquarters in a barn on Minor street gets a big play from the Simon-Pures.

We had a look at the newly-constructed seats in the St. Ann's Boxing Arena and found that the officials have spared no expense in making this miniature stadium one of the most comfortable places to witness a sports event in the State.

Michael Giordano, who has charge of the work, explained that it is the purpose of the members to give the people who witness the shows all the comforts they don't get at another such place... after all, they are the ones who pay the freight.

That's a swell idea Mr. Giordano... those of us who have attended some of the major bouts promoted by nationally-known sports figures can attest to the discomfort the fans are put to, trying to enjoy a show sitting on circus seats... you usually feel like visiting a chiropractor after the show is over.

We understand that the program scheduled for next Monday night is going to be a wow!... Ten bouts with ten local lads meeting a like number of Philadelphians.

ODD FELLOWS VICTIMS OF BRISTOL A. A. NINE

The Bristol A. A. team made but four hits last night in a Lower Bucks County League tilt but this was enough to beat the Odd Fellows, 4-3, and enable the A. A. team to climb into fourth place in the league-standings.

The four hits made by the Mulhol-landers came in the third inning to score the two deciding markers of the contest. The other runs came in the first and second cantoes without the aid of base hits. In the third, Mondo singled but went out trying to stretch the hit. Barrett tripled to right, Dugan hit to Vansant and Barrett was forced to hold third. Heftman singled, counting Barrett. Heftman crossed on Oppman's double to left.

Vansant started on the hill for the Oddies but left in the third and was relieved by Johnny Harmsen. Pat McCarthy hurled the entire game for the winners and although nicked for nine hits scattered them enough to check in with the win.

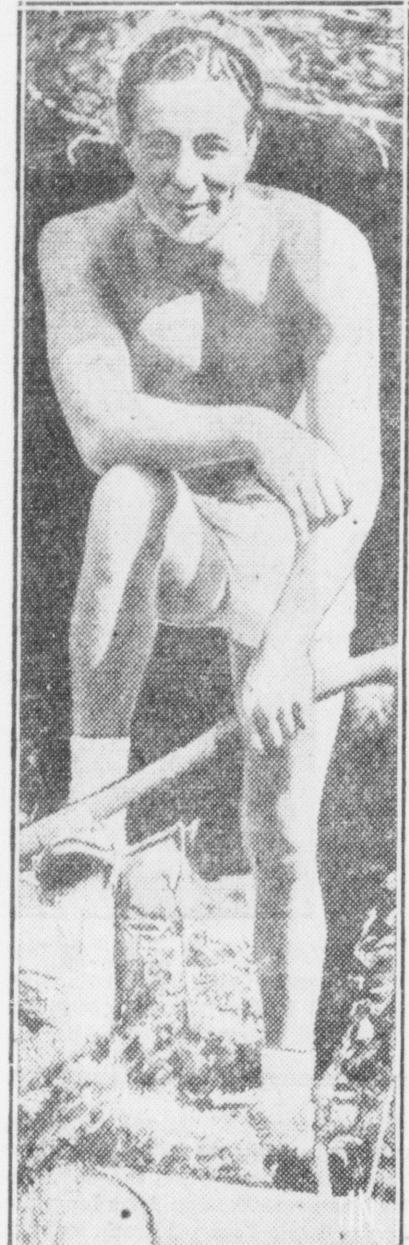

The Oddie rallied in the last inning when Purcell opened with a triple and scored on an infield out but Scott ended the rally by fanning. Two walks and a hit by Davis gave the Radcliffe street boys a run in the second while hits by Mortimer, Mason and Vansant counted the first run in the first.

Gene Dugan came to the rescue of McCarthy in the third when with two runners on he made a wonderful back-handed catch of Erwin's short lift behind third base.

HULMEVILLE INCREASES HOLD ON FIRST PLACE

Hulmeville A. A. increased its edge on first place in the Lower Bucks County League second half race by scoring a 4-2 victory over the Hibernians last night on Reetz's field, Hulmeville. It marked the third straight defeat for the Hibs who after a strong start have faded from the picture.

The hurling and batting of "Ike" Watson was too much for the Hibs. Watson was solved for six hits, three of which came in the only inning in which the Hibs showed any fight, the fifth. Hulmeville picked Roy Davlin for nine hits, three going to Watson.

The Hibernians scored two runs in the fifth when with one out, Devin beat out a hit to short and was forced out at second by Joe Roe. Eddie Roe singled, and an error by Leigh coupled with a hit by Z. Lyzack scored the markers.

Hulmeville A. A. had taken the lead in the third when three runs crossed on walks to Bilger and Leigh, a hit by Watson and doubles by Afterbach and Black. Comly's hit, an error by Devin, and a bingle by Carlen gave the league leaders an unnecessary tally in the last half of the fifth.

SECOND GROUP MATCHES PLAYED ON ELKS' COURT

The second group of matches in the first round of the municipal tennis tournament was played last night on the Elks Club courts.

"Brad" Ardrey won the second set of his postponed match with "Dates" Fagley, giving him a victory 6-1, 6-2.

Dr. Windus defeated attorney "Bill" Conca, 6-2, 6-3.

In the other matches Bill Wisner defeated Fred Durkin, 6-1, 6-4; while McQueen took the measure of Kallenback, 6-2, 6-3.

Veteran "Sam" Pearson, playing his usual steady game, defeated young Fagan, 6-1, 6-4.

Herbert Lawrence announced last night that due to late entries he is unable to tell the pairings, but that matches would be played tonight, Saturday and Sunday.

SEEDMEN SCHEDULE WEEK-END TWIN-BILL

A week-end double-bill is in store for the local followers of the D. Landreth Seed Company baseball nine. Tomorrow evening at 5:30 o'clock the Landrethmen will be matched with the Media A. A. nine, and on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the Burlington team of the Burlington County League will be the attraction here. The games will be played on Leedom's field.

The Landreth Seed-Packers have captured 16 contests thus far this season and are anxious to reach the 20 mark before the fast-fading season draws to a close. Eleven times have the locals been beaten, while three contests ended in deadlocks. This is a wonderful average for a nine that has spent most of the time on the road.

Manager Dave Landreth is undecided as to whom he will start in the week-end tilts. He has Snyder, Hines, Sullivan and Ashby available for duty. Hines has been pitching good ball and may draw the assignment. The receiver for the tilts will be Syd Purcell who has been clouting the apple at a fast gait.

Warren Bruce has an injured hip and it is doubtful whether he will be able to see action, and in that case either Sullivan or Dugan will cover first base. "Joie" Heftman's injured shoulder is well again and he will return to the line-up. Heftman was injured, attempting a diving catch of a liner at Mt. Holly last Sunday.

Gotwald and Rockhill will make up the remainder of the infield, while the outfield will have Leo Hibbs, Paul Barrett, Danny Hines, Snyder or Sullivan. The pitching selection determines the outfield, although Barrett and Hibbs are almost certain of posts.

Media is one of the strongest clubs in the Main Line League and is setting a fast pace for the clubs of that circuit. The locals will have their hands full in trying to take over the Medians.

Burlington won the first half of the Burlington County League, and feature the Pitko brothers who are well known here. Frankie Cook, who played in Bristol on several occasions, is having a fine season with the Burls, as is Willie Arenz and Dominick Fandetta.

The largest crowd of the season is expected to be on hand to witness the "Farmers" try for a double victory.

BOWLING ASSOCIATION PLANS LEAGUE OPENING

The Bristol Bowling Association at its first regular meeting approved the schedule date of the league openings on September 16th.
